Dear Mai,

I hope this letter finds you well. Thanks to your lovely letter, which advised me to do something (17) _____ a hobby but still beneficial for the community. I'm delighted to let you know that I have (18) _____ school cooking club. Now I cook meals for old people in our neighborhood every Friday. We usually make simple dishes such as rice, soup, fish, and vegetables. We also come to the homes of those who find it difficult to go out and about and give them the fresh food. (19) _____ the elderly who live alone are very happy to see us.

I love their smiles when they receive the meals. They often share their favorite (20) _____, which helps us enrich our offered menu. Sometimes, we even sing songs together to create a joyful atmosphere.

I enjoy talking with them and (21) _____ to their stories. Interestingly, they are willing to tell us about their families and how optimistic they are about their grandchildren's future. It's always great to help others and learn kindness. I know you are doing the same thing at your school too. Let's both try to make our community (22) _____!

Love.

Today, many teenagers are attracted to screen-based activities such as online games, social media or web surfing. But if they haven't tried playing a sport yet, now is the perfect time to give it a try!

Playing sports offers numerous benefits for teenagers, both physically and mentally. It helps them stay healthy by keeping their bodies active. Physical activities make teens' hearts stronger and give them more energy and a better shape. Sports help the brain work better, so teens can focus more easily in class. Through sports, teens develop teamwork and sportsmanship. Team sports teach them that the team's success depends on how well the players work together. They learn to prioritise the team's interests over individual performance. These way of thinking aren't just good for school - they're useful in everyday life too. Moreover, sports help teens manage time effectively since they can become more organized and responsible. On top of that, playing sports is a great way to reduce stress. Spending time in training, games and competitions makes them more relaxed and socially connected.

To conclude, playing sports helps teenagers be physically fitter, think more positively, and build better relationships. Therefore, teenagers should take up a sport they enjoy.

Câu 23: A lot of young boys and girls are now fond of online activities.

Câu 24: Sports have some bad effects on teens' concentration in class.

Câu 25: Playing sports is stressful because of its competition.
